Anaesthesia for endoscopic retrograde cholangiopancreatography.

Kapoor H1.

Author information

Abstract

Endoscopic Retrograde Cholangiopancreatography is used for both diagnostic and therapeutic purposes. It is relatively more complex than routine endoscopies and requires adequate patient sedation. Furthermore, the patients often have co-morbidities. This article provides an overview of various anaesthetic drugs and the type of anaesthesiological support.

PMID: 21658012 DOI: 10.1111/j.1399-6576.2011.02462.x

Indexed for MEDLINE